Sgt. Swanson Barber for X Corps General

15 Feb. '51
With X Corps in Korea—Harry D. Swanson, 38, has probably discussed the minor events of the day with more important people than any sergeant in Korea.

He was special barber for General MacArthur at the American Embassy in Tokyo for a year before coming to Korea to serve with Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, X Corps Commander.

While with General MacArthur, Sergeant Swanson, who has developed a line of pleasing pattern to while away shearing time, has groomed the hair of high ranking Army and Navy officers and some of the biggest names in Washington diplomatic circles.

What with a clientele such as he had, the brown-haired, good-natured sergeant couldn't believe it when, after serving as Tokyo's tony barber, he got a call last October to pack up his barber kit and head for Korea.

"Actually though, now I'm glad I came," he tells you in between clipping noises and falling hair. "I'm pretty proud to be chosen to serve with General Almond, you know, there are a lot of barbers who could have been picked."

Both the world-famed generals like to talk while their hair is being clipped, Swanson admits hesitantly, adding, "I don't like to talk about things like this."

Both of the major military figures ask him about his family, which consists of wife Evelyn and sons, Lee and Bruce, back at Locke Mills, Maine, and talk about sports and the little things of the day.

And despite popular conception to the contrary, the sergeant says it's much easier to trim the locks of well-known figures. "The big man is always easier to please than the little fellow."

As a note in passing, he added, "General MacArthur liked his hair cut high in summer and just a trim in winter."

Both generals are "wonderful to work for," he said.

Swanson got into the tony trade after serving a three-year hitch in the wartime Navy, from 1942-45. After that he attended a barber college in Portland, Maine, so it was only natural when he staked his name on the dotted line of an Army contract in May, 1949, that he wind up with shears and lather in his hands.

He joined X Corps in Korea in October, shortly after Corps fighting forces staged their whirlwind liberation of Inchon-Seoul and served with General Almond's troops on both sides of the Korean peninsula.

Swanson was the last American barber to stroll through the streets of embattled Hungnam. "I was on one of the last boats out of town."

Before his military career began, the sergeant attended high school in Plumville, Pa., and later worked for the E. I. DuPont chemical plant at Niagara Falls, N. Y., for five years.

Plans for the future?
"Well, I'd like to bring my family to Japan when this war is over in Korea and go back to my chair with the five-star barber's apron in the embassy in Tokyo."

Incidentally, Swanson haircuts are free. You just sit in the chair and relax.

HOT LUNCH PROGRAM IN NEED OF DISH TOWELS AND GLASSES

The Hot Lunch needs dish towels and glasses, small glasses that have held jelly or cheese. Every child will be asked to bring a dish towel to school next week. This is one way parents can show their appreciation of the wonderful work done by the women who prepare and work at the hot lunches, which feed approximately 200 students a day.

IN OXFORD COUNTY...

Two Buckfield sisters, Louise 14 and Jeannette 16, missing since Sept. 21, were located last week in Jacksonville, Fla., where they were living with a family. Louise was brought back home by her father but the older girl chose to stay. The girls are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Gammon, but the older girl was adopted by his sister and took the name of Millett.

An estimated $30,000 damage was caused to town equipment at Norway Friday night, when fire broke out in the new town shed. A utility truck was destroyed and a grader badly damaged, besides considerable damage to the building.

A derailed freight car bumped safely across a trestle about 90 feet above the Little Androscoggin River, at South Paris, early Monday morning. The 16 car train continued for about a mile and half before the derailed car dragged two other cars off the track. The freight which was pulling in to South Paris for water and additional cars, was carrying mixed freight to Canada and the Middle West.

The wreck held up highway traffic at a South Paris crossing several hours, and the passenger train from Portland was delayed for 45 minutes. Officials were amazed that the train made it safely over the trestle after examining the damage.

PLAYERS' THRILLER "DRUMS OF DEATH" AT BINGHAM GYM TONIGHT AND FRIDAY NIGHT

The curtain will rise tonight on the stage of the William Bingham Gymnasium at 8:00 for the first performance of "Drums of Death," a mystery thriller being performed and presented by the Bethel Players as a community service. With a plot thick with intrigue, sprinkled with comic relief, it features many veterans of the Players including Red Noyes, Elsie Waldron, Patricia Carter, Ad Saunders, supported by Marguerite Clark, Rita Davis, Blackie Cummings, Josie Whitman, John and Adele Robinson. Co-directors June Greig and Alma Young have provided the play with plenty of fascinating action against a backdrop of a new stage set constructed for the Players by Roland Gilnes and Charlie Freeman. A second performance will be given tomorrow evening. Tickets for the play are being sold at Bosserman's Pharmacy.

SOLICITORS ORGANIZED FOR ANNUAL RED CROSS DRIVE

Today, March 1, the annual Red Cross Drive commences. It is well to realize what services the Bethel Branch of the Southern Oxford Chapter have rendered to our nation and our own community. The Junior Red Cross, too, has done its share of gifts to the children of other nations as evidenced by the letters of appreciation in the hands of the Academy.

Following the 1950 drive our proportionate quota was sent to headquarters for national use in stocking blood banks, training first aiders and nurses, accident prevention, rendering relief in hurricanes, wrecks, floods, fires, and other disasters (assistance where five or more families are involved); and now lastly for the armed forces.

Locally we used our own share for glasses, operations and other help to children; home service for family needs; layette materials and gauze dressings to be made up by our loyal lady workers; support of Togs activities; fire relief cases; first aid supplies for the schools; meals and clothing for girls; and providing instruction, facilities and transportation for the successful summer swimming program.

Because of expanded services, the reduced purchasing power of the dollar, and particularly the demands resulting from Korea, our quota for this year has been increased 50 per cent. So when the friendly solicitors call on you, remember the great amount of good being done right here in town and give them your generous support.

These courageous volunteers are: Miss Alice Ballard, Elmer Bennett; Mrs. Cleve Bartlett, Mrs. Ernest Bisbee, Norris Brown, Mrs. Arnel Brown, Mrs. Stanley Brown, Mrs. Dana Douglas, Mrs. Clayton Foster, Mrs. Charles Gorman, Mrs. Robert Hastings, John P. Howe, Mrs. Edward Holder, Mrs. Hattie Hutchins, Mrs. Norvin Humphrey, Mrs. Robert Keniston, Mrs. Charles Merrill, Mrs. G. T. Murphy, Mrs. Robert Nichols, Mrs. Rufus Rice, Karl Stearns, Mrs. Albert Sumner, Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. G. L. Thurston, Earl Williamson.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

A group of 18 boys from the troop watched a demonstration Thursday night of an Emerson Respiator. This wonderful machine takes all the guess-work out of artificial respiration and can perform several other jobs also.

The Scout rooms are now nearly completed and the boys are most grateful to the Lions Club as well as the many parents and friends who have made this project possible.

This Thursday evening Freedland Clark will be our guest and his part of the program will be devoted to a discussion of the habits of Heaven.

All boys should plan to attend this very interesting feature. There are only a few weeks left before the annual waste paper drive. We hope that all you folks are getting your paper and magazines together and banded ready for us to pick up.

Gould Skiers Win Close Sport Events

With excellent weather and a light, fast snow surface for all ski events, Gould Academy's Annual Winter Carnival climaxed its two-day events with the Carnival Ball in the William Bingham Gymnasium Saturday evening, Feb. 24.

As host to ski teams from five schools, Edward Little, Auburn; Lebanon High School, Lebanon, N. H.; Lyndon Institute, Lyndon, Vt.; Berlin High School, Berlin, N. H.; and Stephens High School, Rumford, Gould was a busy place for the crisp and wintry series of outdoor and indoor festivities. Scores of alumni, parents, and friends from every New England state gathered to watch the Gould ski team pull out a narrow victory in the four events of the ski meet.

The entire carnival was under the direction of Vance Richardson and Paul Kallay of the Gould faculty. Three one-act plays were presented for the guests' entertainment on Friday evening, Feb. 23, under the direction of Harry Miele and David Thompson of the Gould faculty.

The snow sculpture contest was won by the sophomore class, with a well executed motif of clapped hands under the title of "The Tie that Binds." Honorable mention went to the junior class for its figure of a seal and a penguin.

The crowning of the Carnival Queen was performed half-way through the Saturday Carnival Ball by Senior Master Edmond J. Vachon, assisted by his young son Paul as crown bearer. By student vote the 1951 Carnival Queen was Mary Alice Hastings of East Bethel. Her court attendants were Ellen Linnell, West Peru; Peggy Champlain, Lexington, Mass.; Jane Daland, Durham, N. H.; Marylou Flynn, Winchester, Mass.; Sue Hamilton, Melrose, Mass.; Jean Rawick, Westbrook; Joy Smith, New Vineyard; and Sally Robinson, Dallas, Pa.

Socialism Shows Its Thorns

A great truth was written when James Russell Lowell penned the following lines: "There is no such thing as a free lunch." The few people who tried to work even though sometimes one thing can kill. Make Lemonade from Lemons of Life

HERE'S HOW Mrs. Gregory Austin, who lives in Los Angeles, made lemonade from a lemon that was handed her.

When she was only 13 years old and just beginning to think of a career and dating the boys, an explosion occurred that took three fingers from her left hand. She had suffered a handicap previous to this in that her right arm had been scarred from a blood tumor. But this calamity seemed to be the last straw. She was terribly self-conscious over the loss of those fingers and hid her hand whenever she could. By and by she began to develop an inferiority complex, felt resentful toward life.

She had been reared in a family that had little of this world's goods and so had a feeling of insecurity in addition to the above.

But she had something else, too, something that stood her in good stead: pride. She was not going to let others know how she felt. So during the day she appeared self-confident, poised, and friendly. Her nights were filled with bad dreams. She really cared nothing about living. That was a burden for a very young person to carry, a young person who had not yet developed a philosophy to live by.

Then one day she read something about capitalizing on one's best qualities. And that's where the lemon came in, the lemon that made good lemonade. She made friends easily; she certainly was not homely of face. She capitalized on the former, and the friends took care of the latter, for when she was 18 years old she was voted the most popular girl in an organization of 6,000 people. She came in second in a beauty contest. She was nominated for the presidency of one of their organizations and, although she lost to a boy who was considered to have special qualifications, she felt highly honored because she was the only girl ever nominated for the office. She was offered a movie screen test three times, but she preferred the role of wife and mother, is now happily married and has a beautiful child.

"After all," she says, "most people have some handicap, why should I worry about mine?"

THIS WEEK IN Washington

THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE announced during this past week that defense spending has jumped to $40 billion per month. That means only one thing, that there will be no more money for other orders from the national production authority. Further restriction of the use of materials for non-essential purposes is being considered.

This military spending figure jumped from about $3 billion a month back in November and December, so when the orders get into production it will take quite a bite out of the materials supply. And when the producers go to filling these military orders under a priority rating, there just won't be enough left over for the non-essential commodities now being produced for civilian consumption.

There are many who believe that because the steel industry is producing so much steel, it is not necessary to restrict its production. But the steel industry is producing so much steel, it is not necessary to restrict its production. But the steel industry is producing so much steel, it is not necessary to restrict its production.

There have been many complaints from small business firms for these past few days, for many small businesses have been hit hard by the steel industry's production. There have been many complaints from small business firms for these past few days, for many small businesses have been hit hard by the steel industry's production.

It appears that Price Administrator Michael E. DeLoach is going to make his reputation to stick or swim on the issue of meat. Many representatives of the meat industry are coming down here to Washington to tell him and others it is impossible for him to control either the price or the amount of meat that is produced.

New Mr. DeLoach, having also provided for heavy penalties for violations of these orders, is seeking to find a way to fix the price of livestock on the hoof, and it won't be long before such an order is issued.

At present, livestock are not included in the price freeze, although the freeze starts at the first process point after slaughtering. Congressman Harold Conley (R-Mo.), chairman of the house agriculture committee, the other day said he was tired of having people blame the farmers for the high price of meat.

"As long as there is a reasonable supply of meat, which there will be as long as farmers are left free to produce in abundance, the price of meat and other meats will continue to reflect what the farmer would like to get for his animals, but what the consumer thinks it is worth," Congressman Conley said.

"And," he continued, "if the American consumers don't think the farmers' produce, let's say specifically, meat, is worth the price at which it is selling, they can bring it down overnight by refusing to buy meat at the prices quoted. Poultry, eggs, dairy products, beans, fish . . . all contain high quantities of protein to nutritious and palatable forms."

A WORD TO WORK WITH
Today's word is govern.

Govern comes into current speech through the old French from the Greek and from the Latin gubernare to steer, pilot, govern. Webster says it means to direct and control the action or conduct of, either by established laws or by arbitrary will, to direct and control to rule or regulate by authority. The Ten Commandments and the Beatitudes are essential in the foundation of government.

One should rule out fear and doubt and selfishness and let loving, strong ideas . . . intelligence govern his daily work in our United States of America, the great-hearted do not work for self-glory, but for the unending answer to Abraham Lincoln's prayer at Gettysburg: "That this nation, under God, be given a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

CAN THIS BE "THE THING?"

By LITTLE HULL

NEW YORK STATE is contemplating a change in its laws which would increase the penalty for trafficking in narcotics to 15 years in prison.

To any one who has visited an institution for the care and "care" of a addict, such a punishment is a farce. The penalty for prostitution, murder in the electric chair or life imprisonment, death by shooting, stabbing or poisoning is quick and most often painless. Death by the drug route means years of terrible torture.

Not one person reading this believes himself capable of murdering his wife, mother or child. Not one believes he would get up in the prisoner's box and swear his life away, as they do in the Communist trials, if by so doing he could be relieved of the awful craving for "just one shot." But experts tell us that there is no one capable of resisting anything in order to get relief from the torture; that character ceases to exist in the semi-dead mind of the addict. A visit to an institution will quickly assure one of this claim.

A grown man or woman is supposed to have sense enough to avoid drugs. But what does some poor little kid in school know about such things? Do the dope peddlers start these children in the use of some drug in order, often, just to lead the child as a messenger to deliver his wares to clients who can pay for them. And the life of a fine little boy or girl is destroyed. Far less cruel to murder the child quickly!

And These Often Multiple Murderers Get Off With From Three to 10 Years Imprisonment!

The peddlers and dope smugglers are destroying hundreds of our countrymen every year. If they were hanged for giving drugs to a child, and given "life" at hard labor for selling to grownups—without any time off for good behavior—thousands of fine Americans would be saved from a slow, terrible and sordid death.

Many are "cured"—but few remain cured!

anarchy, for communism, for self-will, nor for dictatorship of any kind. Not even that misconception called benevolent dictatorship has house-room here. Let us keep alive our gratitude to the great giver of all good—even our God—for the inspired constitution of the U. S. A., and support the government in all of its branches: legislative, executive, and judicial.

This vitality is one with unselfishness, with obedience to divine law and the law of our land, and with the inspiration of the gospel and its use in Christianly Christian living in the American way.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLDTIMERS

From A. M. Roberts, Long Beach, Calif.: I remember while living in the county five miles from where our family doctor lived, and many times I have seen him on horseback, and sometimes on foot, trying to make his calls, and often times he would be as much as two or three days late in getting to our place. I have gone to the swamp, cut some slippery elm bark, brought it in and put some in a glass of water. So when the doctor came he would sit by the sickbed, cut some pieces of paper in which he would roll some quinine. This would then be put in a spoon with some slippery elm and given to the patient.

From Thurman A. Smith, Taylor, Neb.: I remember when (1880) in the upper reaches of the North Loop river valley, a frame house was rarely seen. Sodders, dugouts and log cabins were constructed and occupied almost exclusively by the pioneer homesteaders. Many were roofed with dirt and willow thatch, and the floors were of clay and the walls plastered with the same material.

From the Old Prospector, Cherry, Wyo.: I remember when harness shops had a large wooden horse in the front window to display the harness.

From Mrs. Estelle C. Laughlin, Gerling, Neb.: I remember when magazines carried ads for "John Medina's Waves, Bangs, Frizzes and Swirls" for "Fashionable Ladies." That was the "Hair Age."

From Mrs. Kate Harrison, Stanton, Ala.: I remember when we soaked on the fireplace in ovens and skillets and my stepmother spun thread and made cloth on the loom.

From Mrs. Mary Garbarini, Portland, N.Y.: I remember when the beds we had at home consisted of a straw tick and a feather bed. When we threshed in the fall, mother would lay aside some of the old straw and wash and fill with the new straw. The straw tick was placed on slats and the feather bed on that. One had to climb up to get in bed at night, but we would slide far down into the new fluffy beds. To make them up, we would turn the feather bed back, reach in and shake the straw from both sides. It was quite a trick in those days to have a nice smooth bed, believe me.

From Mrs. E. C. Phinney, Milwaukee, Wis.: I remember when I was a small girl in Mt. Hope, Wyo., my mother would send me up to her father's shop for a quarter's worth of bologna. The butcher would come out of the back room with three rings hanging on his arm. Besides giving us three rings for a quarter, he would give me an additional big piece of bologna to eat on the way home.

From Mrs. Mary Stewart, Chicago: I remember when bologna were washed in the butter alone. What a struggle! Tears, perseverance and the rusty dope did the trick.

From E. H. Meredith, Fairmont, W. Va.: I remember when pound packages of Arbuckle's coffee contained cards with information about the various states and children traded with the hope of getting every state.

From Estelle C. Laughlin, Gerling, Neb.: I remember when a girl who dated rode her horse astride was called "a bold lady."

Hot Cross Buns Add Spicy Flavor to Lenten Meals!

"These puffy, brown puffy hot cross buns, if your daughter don't like 'em, she's not in your tent." So says the old rhyme. But today there's no doubt about who likes these Lenten favorites.

Especially popular with daughters, sons and all the family are Jack Father Hot Cross Buns. They're made with a special blend of spices and with those delicious, buttery, sticky, and topped with a cross of candied fruit.

NOW AND THEN we like to bunch together practical tips on child care that aren't long enough for an article. Here are six today, beginning with bananas and ending with adoption!

1. When you start serving the baby mashed bananas, don't leave lumps for him to reject. Mash the banana carefully with a fork, whip until creamy, and then add to baby's cereal.

2. "Trading work" has been a part of farm life ever since pioneer days, and used to be, before automobiles, the basis for farm social life. Why not try it in persuading your children to be more helpful about the home? If Gladys's daily chores are to clean her room and wash the dinner dishes, why not say new and then, "I'll clean your room today if you will prepare dinner tonight?" Maybe you and father will then wash the dishes, since it is a wonderful feeling to cook a meal and know you don't have to clean up afterwards. Variety in household tasks is the best way, too, to teach the overall job of housekeeping.

3. A three-year-old can have a delightful time entertaining his year-old brother or sister, or visiting playmates, by playing records for them. The charm of a record player is that the child can satisfy his innate desire to hear the same thing over and over again. A recent record, Bozo on the Farm, orchestrates animal sounds into a clever barnyard scene which children love to hear.

4. A small village in England is threatening to institute driving tests for youngsters with tricycles and homemade wagons. The seeds of careless driving are planted in the child who becomes a road hog in his first experience on wheels. Not only for his own safety and the safety of pedestrians, but for his future as a responsible driver, the young child should be taught traffic rules and traffic courtesy.

5. Little babies love pictures even before they are old enough to hold a book. One inexpensive way of supplying these is to cut out magazine illustrations that are in color and paste them on the cardboard that come in shirts from the laundry. Paste a picture on each side so if the cardboard falls to the floor, as it is certain to do, there will always be a picture face up. Although babies don't distinguish colors as yet, they are attracted by them. Experiments have shown that babies look longer at pieces of colored paper than at pieces of gray paper when both were hung over their cribs. By eight months babies begin to show a preference for red.

6. If ever you doubt the wisdom of spending a lot of time being friends with your baby, listen to the tales of parents who have adopted babies who had had institutional care until they were six or nine months old. These babies are usually in good health, their physical needs having been well met. But often they are inert, listless, scarcely protesting about a thing (for they haven't learned that their cries will bring a happy voice and tender presence).

EASY DOES IT

IN BUYING a shank half of ham, have about two inches of the shank bone cut off. Then, when you make soup from the bone, you'll be able to get the bones more easily into the average-sized kettle.

Backbones on pork loin roasts should be loosened before you leave the butcher. Carving this roast will be an easy matter since you need only draw the knife between each rib.

Serving spareribs will be easier if you have the ribs cracked in several places before they're cooked.

Short ribs should be cut off on rib roasts, or the bones should be cracked. The backbone should also be loosened by the butcher, and if

RECIPES OF THE WEEK

Egg Foo Young
(Makes 12 cakes)

1 cup coarsely chopped cooked chicken
2 tablespoons butter
1 can bean sprouts, drained
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon finely chopped green pepper
6 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon salt
Brown chicken lightly in butter. Add bean sprouts, onion, celery and green pepper. Cover and cook a few minutes until onion is transparent. Cool slightly. Spoon chicken-vegetable mixture into beaten eggs, straining out liquid in bottom of pan. Add salt. Mix thoroughly. Pour about ¼ cup mixture in hot fat, about ½ inch deep. Flatten "cake" to ½ inch thickness. Cook until brown on both sides, turning once. Drain and serve hot with soy sauce.

can be removed in the kitchen before you bring the meat to the table.

If you're serving fried chicken, have dark meat pieces on one side of the platter, and light on the other. Then no one will have to poke around looking for his or her preference.

Carving any roast or fowl is much simpler if the meat does not slip around the platter. It can be anchored on a board that has nails long enough to hook into the roast. The piece of wood used should be small enough to fit a platter easily.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Small Communities Will Care For Evacuees of Bombed City

By Walter A. Sheard

(This is the second in a series of five articles on the all-important subject of civil defense.)

If you were one of those directly beneath the explosion of an atomic bomb over your home town tonight, there would be practically no hope of your survival. Even if you lived anywhere within a half-mile of the center of the explosion, your chances of living to tell the tale would be about one in ten. From a half-mile to a mile away, you would have about a 50-50 chance, and farther away than that your chances would be pretty good that you would be able to help your less fortunate neighbors.

And of course within these areas your chances of injury would be even greater than your chances of recovery from radioactivity or other injuries would be good.

And if you have a few minutes warning of an impending air raid, these chances are vastly improved. What should you do, even if you have only a few seconds warning? The first thing to remember is to fall flat on your face. If you have time to pick a spot to fall, choose first to flatten out against a cellar wall or even an inside wall, or beneath a sturdy table or bench. Or if you are outside, drop beside the base of a building, or fall into a ditch or gutter. And when you fall, cover your face in the crook of your arm, and cover any exposed skin with whatever is handy and hold it for several seconds after the explosion to prevent flash burns.

To you folks in the home towns of the nation and in the rural areas there is little danger of a direct atomic bomb overhead, for the enemy would most certainly aim at one or more of some 16 strategic target areas in large cities and industrial areas. But your neighbors in just several large cities might suffer as follows: A surprise daylight attack on an average city would produce about 100,000 casualties. Of this total, approximately 60,000 would be killed outright or die the first day. An additional 20,000 would die in the following five or six weeks. Of the 40,000 remaining, about 40,000 might be suffering from burns, 40,000 from mechanical injuries and 10,000 from radiation injuries. This total of over 100 per cent arises from the fact that a large number of casualties would be suffered from two or more types of injuries. To top this staggering total, there follows the complex and difficult job of evacuation, either after the bomb drop, or of course, if there is warning, preferably before the drop.

And here is where folks in strictly rural communities and the small towns of the country can play a tremendously important role in their state's civil defense setup.

The Ministry of Defense has estimated that in the fall of 1945 the enemy would most certainly aim at one or more of some 16 strategic target areas in large cities and industrial areas.

NATIONAL 4-H CLUB WEEK

STARTS SATURDAY, MARCH 3

"Working Together for World Understanding" is the theme of some 1,800,000 4-H boys and girls throughout the nation in observance of National 4-H Club Week, March 3-11. During the week, boys and girls between the ages of 10-21 will be urged to join one of the many clubs throughout the country, parents will be invited to attend 4-H club meetings and get acquainted with some of the objectives of this largest youth organization in the world.

Four-H club work is a kind of training in which rural youth learn better ways of farming and home-making, better ways of working together in groups, on community matters and for world understanding. It puts emphasis on self-reliance, character, and an appreciation of the things of the open country. It makes for good homes, good citizens, and a cultural rural life.

Each and every individual in the country should make a sincere effort to get acquainted with 4-H work and its objectives during National 4-H Club Week, March 3-11.

An original poem written by Mrs. Doris Lord was read and enjoyed.
